The Art of Invitation

Would you like to develop your own, or support others to deliver, creative approaches to community engagement?

“This course was so rich and powerful. The facilitators were quite remarkable and this week was without doubt the most powerful educative experience I have ever had.”

How can we bring people together across difference to actively engage with challenges facing our communities? How can we ask questions creatively to activate meaningful dialogue? What skills, resources and capacities do people already have that can be built upon?

The Art of Invitation training offers new creative tools for change that can resource you and your projects, groups, communities and organisations to engage in the ecological, cultural and social challenges of our time.

You will learn about:

- New approaches to engaging people in creative, collective responses to challenges facing their communities
- Creative ways to activate and inspire people to participate
- A participatory approach to facilitation, involving doing,

making and reflecting, both individually and in groups

- Creative approaches to bring groups of people together and maintain their involvement

The Art of Invitation training can be run as a 1, 3 or 5 day course depending on your requirements. It can be delivered at your venue, exclusively for your group, or you may wish to join one of our existing courses. Please contact us for more information, or you can check our website for the latest course listings.

Cost: We can plan a programme of activities to meet your budget requirements, and some of our courses offer bursary assisted places.
